Localfoodshop is a brand new e-commerce website designed to create maximum profit and minimum hassle for food producers and farmers who want to sell their goods online.

The website works like a virtual farmer's market. You upload information about you and your products, customers browse the different pages, and then place an order and pay online. You get the order and deliver the goods.

Localfoodshop is ideal if you are new to online selling, or if you want to boost existing online sales. It also helps shops, box schemes and food hubs take orders online.

Through partnerships with key organisations like BBC Good Food, and top level PR, we'll be directing thousands of customers to the site.

Interested? Have a look at www.localfoodshop.co.uk where you can find out more about the project and register online now.

How it works:

Customers start by entering their postcode, then select by product type.

This generates a list of their nearest producers or shops. Each vendor has their own page, with products listed, which the customer selects. They pay online, we send you the order, and you get paid at the end of each month.

This way, customers get the best food locally, reducing food miles and giving the local economy a boost...
